

The Indiana University Northwest School of Business and Economics is accredited by the Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB International). AACSB International is a not-for-profit organization consisting of education organizations and corporations. Its mission is excellence in management education in colleges and universities. Headquartered in Tampa, Florida, AACSB International is the premier accrediting agency and service organization for business schools.

The School of Business & Economics offers a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration with concentrations in Financial Information Systems, Economics and in Business Administration, and a Masters in Business Administration. More than 448 students are enrolled in the undergraduate program and 132 are enrolled students in the graduate program. The School of Business & Economics is led by Dean Anna S. Rominger and includes 16 full-time faculty members in the fields of marketing, management, accounting, finance, and management information systems.

The objective of the Indiana University Northwest Business Alliance is to create a professional partnership between the Indiana University Northwest School of Business & Economics and members of the northwest Indiana Business Community who join the Alliance. This partnership is intended to increase the interaction between the School and the business community in the following ways: (1) by leveraging faculty and staff expertise to assist local businesses and (2) by preparing and retaining the School's students for jobs in northwest Indiana by providing them internships and ensuring business input into the School's curriculum planning and Mission processes.

A Fundraiser Featuring Walter Jacobson

Walter Jacobson

Walter Jacobson (born July 28, 1937) is a Chicago television news personality and former anchor who hosted FOX Chicago Perspective, a one-hour news and political show that aired Sunday mornings on WFLD-TV. He was the principal anchor on WFLD's FOX News at 9 p.m. until his 2006 retirement.

Jacobson began his career at WBBM-TV as a writer and a reporter. In 1971 he moved over to WMAQ for two years, but returned to WBBM as an investigative reporter and anchor. He was solo anchor of the 5 p.m. news for 10 years and co-anchor of the 10 p.m. newscast for 16 years. For most of his time at WBBM, his co-anchor was Bill Kurtis. They formed a legendary anchor team in Chicago during the mid-1970s and early 1980s, when WBBM dominated the Chicago ratings

Jacobson's commentary, anchoring, and reporting skills have made him the recipient of several prestigious awards. The Chicago Chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences recognized his commentaries with Emmy Awards. In 1985, a Washington Journalism Review poll named Jacobson best local anchor in the United States.

In 1988, he received his fifth Peter Lisagor Award, his third for "best commentary." During the 1980s, the Du-Pont-Columbia judges honored him twice, once for his commentaries and the other for best local election coverage in the United States because of his work with Channel 2. Jacobson's notable WBBM-TV specials and programs included the Emmy Award-winning "Walter Jacobson's Journal: China" and "Studebaker: Less Than They Promised," which received a Peabody Award.
