MARY PORTERFIELD IN:DEPENDENCE - LAYERED DRAWINGS ON PAPER

*November 12, 2018 - January 11, 2019
Savannah Center, Gallery for Contemporary Art*

This exhibition will include new works by Chicago artist Mary Porterfield. Porterfield's drawings are influenced by her work as an occupational therapist and her interactions with patients and their caregivers. In painting on transparent, glassine paper, she progressively layers her images to address reoccurring struggles in healthcare that are outwardly hidden or forgotten. With her grandmother as her model, she hopes to convey the loss of identity that can occur as degenerative illnesses affect one's ability to complete self-care or functional movement. The underlying layers represent the obscured sense of self that attempts to overcome those difficulties.
